

FACULTY OF AGRICULTURE, FOOD AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Whether you're interested in courses for professional development, you'd like to further your career or you just want to learn for the love of it, there is something on offer for you as a postgraduate.

The Faculty of Agriculture, Food & Natural Resources is one of the most interconnected of all the University of Sydney's schools and faculties. This interdisciplinary approach is universally regarded as crucial to meeting the challenges of food security and ecological sustainability. The Faculty is committed to providing an exceptional learning experience.

Ask a question

If you would like further information about postgraduate candidature please email the Coordinator Postgraduate Studies (Pamela Stern) agriculture.pg@sydney.edu.au

We also invite you to send us copies of your previous academic transcripts and a comprehensive Curriculum Vitae. This should include a 250 word summary of your research and professional experience interests, e.g publications, conferences, previous funding, awards, English proficiency etc. With this information we are better equipped to advise you about potential degrees, supervisors or projects agriculture.pg@sydney.edu.au