Cultural, religious and social infrastructure, most of which have been destroyed as a result of the tsunami, serve as the basis for redevelopment and resettlement and the hub of community life, enabling resumption of life and the process of healing.