Leslie Naa Norle Lokko is of Ghanaian-Scots parentage and grew up in Ghana, West Africa. She received her BSc in Architecture from the Bartlett School of Architecture, London, in 1992; her Diploma in Architecture from the same institution in 1995 and is currently completing her PhD in Architecture at the University of London. She has taught in the UK, the USA and South Africa and is currently Visiting African Scholar at the University of Cape Town and Visiting Professor of Architecture at the University of Westminster. She has lectured and published widely on the subjects of race, cultural identity and their relationship to Architecture. She has recently completed construction of her own home in Accra, Ghana where she now lives. She has published two works of fiction and is currently working on her third novel. Together with David Adjaye, she is currently co-curator of the Africa exhibition at the 10th International Venice Biennale.