Welcome

“The Department of English at the University of Sydney is by far the largest of its kind in the country. In the 2017 QS World University Rankings, English Language and Literature at Sydney University was ranked 18th in the world, a clear measure of its teaching and research strengths. With over 20 undergraduate units of study and over 20 postgraduate units taught in any one year, the Department offers the most comprehensive program in the country. You can study literature from the Anglo-Saxon classics through to the latest contemporary works, and be taught by world experts in each of these periods.

Professor Robert Dixon, FAHA
Professor of Australian Literature and Chair of Department

The Department constantly expands its offerings. Recent new courses include a first-year unit on Global Literatures in English to introduce students to this highly current and expanding field. In 2018, we will run a first-year creative writing unit. It fits into a larger first year program that includes Introduction to Film Studies; Language, Texts and Time; The Gothic Imagination; Narratives of Romance and Adventure; and Constructing the Fictive Self. You can find out more about these units in this guide. An exciting innovation is the Department’s set of undergraduate Creative Writing units that foster students’ practice and knowledge of creative writing through interactive workshops, seminars and lectures, led by established writers and academics. The Department’s Senior level units cover a vast array of periods and topics including Australian Gothic, the Victorian Novel, Literature and Cinema, Modern Irish Literature, Transpacific American Literature, Shakespeare, Dreams and Visions, Issues in the Semiotics of Language, Introduction to Old English, and The Literary in Theory. Information on these and all the other undergraduate units of study is contained in the following pages.

At postgraduate level your options are just as extensive. Units such as Sentiment and Sensation, Wooing Women in Middle English Romance, Shakespeare and Modernity, Australian Literature and the Canonical Imaginary, Reading Suburbia, and Language and Subject are just some of the offerings within our world-class Master of English Studies program, which also includes core units on Literary History, Genre, Global Literature and Critical Reading. The Master of Creative Writing program is designed for new, established and developing writers to develop their creative practice in a stimulating university environment. It offers in-depth consideration of fiction and poetry, taught in small groups by respected writers and academics.

If your interests lie in the interactions between literature and film, in ancient or modern drama, in American literature or Jane Austen, literary theory or linguistics, in transatlantic, transpacific or Australian literature, in the plays of Shakespeare, in global literatures, in modernism, postmodernism, contemporary British poetry or in creative writing, Sydney has something for you.”
English

at the University of Sydney

English students learn a wide range of skills in close reading, textual interpretation and critical argument. They examine how writers from different cultures over many centuries have used poetry, drama and prose to represent real and imaginative worlds. As the largest English Department in the country, our staff of internationally distinguished scholars teach and research in all fields from the medieval to the contemporary, from Old English riddles to the narrative puzzles of modern cinema, not forgetting the great novels, poems, and drama of centuries of Western culture.

Studying English at Sydney University will introduce you to this wide range of literary and cultural works where you will encounter the richness, breadth and depth of the Department’s research and teaching culture, allowing you to customise your study according to your interests. The Department offers undergraduate and postgraduate coursework and research programs, allowing students to expand upon and explore their passion for literature in all its forms, and in many social, historical and narrative contexts.

Career opportunities

English is a broad and dynamic discipline that offers a variety of transferable skills relevant to many different career situations, as these evolve over time. Traditionally, an English degree prepares students for careers in teaching, the media, public and community service, and academia, and in any vocation or area that demands intellectual flexibility and versatility, critical thinking and the ability to communicate. Employers today value the kind of broad levels of expertise provided by an Arts degree, rather than the narrower professional skills generated by vocational training. The cultural knowledge and critical skills provided by an English major are not only marketable for a wide variety of career situations but will also enrich you personally, giving you analytical and communication skills to draw on throughout your life.
English

Undergraduate program

The Department of English offers the widest array of choice in an undergraduate program in this discipline in Australia, especially coordinated to allow you to pursue your own interests in a carefully graduated manner. With us you may complete a major in English or a minor in Australian Literature, and if you wish to pursue your interests still further you may proceed to a fourth year of Honours in English Literature.

Our areas of specialisation include:

Old and Middle English (800-1500, approx.)
Early Modern (1500-1750)
Eighteenth Century and Romantic (1750-1837)
Victorian (1837-1901)
20th and 21st Century
Australian, American, or British literatures
Literary theory
Global Literatures in English
Cultural, gender, postcolonial and American studies
Film and multimedia
Linguistics and language studies
Creative Writing
English Major and Minor

A major in English will provide you with an extensive, in-depth, and coherent understanding of the discipline of English, tailored to your own interests in the subject. The English major will broaden and deepen your literary, cultural and historical understanding, developing skills in expression, interpretation, discussion and argumentation that can be put to good use in a wide variety of professional situations.

Requirements for Completion

A major in English requires 48 credit points from the Unit of Study table including:

(i) 12 credit points of 1000-level selective units
(ii) 12 credit points of 2000-level selective units
(iii) 18 credit points of 3000-level selective units
(iv) FASS3999 Interdisciplinary Project unit

A minor in English requires 36 credit points from the Unit of Study table including:

(i) 12 credit points of 1000-level units
(ii) 12 credit points of 2000-level units
(iii) 12 credit points of 3000-level units

First year

First year English introduces students to a diverse range of units, from global, gothic, and American literatures, to studies of language, narrative and the ‘fictive’ self, as well as film studies and creative writing. The completion of any two units will enable you to undertake an English major. You can shape your unit choice with a view to later pathways, or simply follow your current interests from the selection on offer. In dynamic lectures and tutorials you will learn fundamental critical skills in the reading and analysis of texts that will equip you for further study in English, while acquiring confidence and proficiency in oral and written assignments.

Second year

Second year English allows you to consolidate your study of the discipline. You might choose a variety of units, or you may prefer to focus your learning through one of a diverse array of pathways including: fiction, drama, poetry, film, language, modern and global literature, Medieval literature, American literature, Australian literature, eighteenth and nineteenth-century literature, and creative writing. Whatever you decide, you will develop your understanding of English to the next level, along with your ability to read, research and critically respond to complex imaginative texts. In class and in well-tailored assessment tasks you will advance your fluency in writing and analysis, and engage inclusively and collaboratively with your peers.

Third year

Third year English builds on the skills you have acquired in first and second year, and rounds off your major through high-level study of particular texts, the national and international contexts that shape them, and the cultural and historical milieus in which they circulate and are read. Third-year units are generally taught in seminar mode, taking advantage of staff expertise in specialist areas. Working closely with lecturers and with their peers in small groups, students more directly shape the learning experience. You will progress your knowledge of critical theory and practice in order to be able to apply your disciplinary skills in diverse and interdisciplinary ways. Assessments are designed to test your superior research and writing abilities.

Fourth Year

If you would like to deepen your knowledge and skills in this major, you can complete an additional year combining your Bachelor of Arts degree with the new Bachelor of Advanced Studies. In the Bachelor of Advanced Studies, you can undertake advanced coursework, complete a second major, combine studies from a range of disciplines and get involved in cross-disciplinary community, professional, research or entrepreneurial project work. http://sydney.edu.au/courses/bachelor-of-arts

Australian Literature Minor

The Australian Literature minor, which runs through the Department of English, will give you a broad understanding of the history and characteristics of Australian literature in its international contexts. It will offer you the chance to become better acquainted with writing in and about Australia, as well as with Australian writers in their various national and international contexts. The program introduces you to a wide range of literary and cultural works – poems, plays, novels and films – from colonial times to the present day, including works by Indigenous authors. You will encounter the richness, breadth and depth of Australian Literature through the introduction and examination of some of the innovative and influential works that have shaped Australia's cultural heritage. Australian Literature at the University of Sydney teaches students to express advanced theoretical concepts with insight, clarity and rigour, whilst engaging with the literature and ideas that have contributed to the nation’s distinctive intellectual and artistic formations. Through class discussion and presentations, essay writing and exams, you will hone critical skills central to the Australian Literature minor. You will also learn how to read works closely and make sophisticated connections between Australian writing and the wider culture.

1000-Level

ENGL1002 Narratives of Romance and Adventure
This unit explores the art of narrative from Greek and Roman antiquity to the present. What makes Homer’s Odyssey and Ovid’s Metamorphoses defining texts for the history of narrative? Why are the early masters of English narrative so compelling? How does a film like O Brother, Where Art Thou? fit in? Issues of particular relevance include: genre, epic and myth; the unfolding of adventure and gender relations; intertextuality and the nature of humankind.

ENGL1007 Language Texts and Time
This unit of study equips students with some general tools for the close analysis of literary language. Grammatical concepts will be introduced and applied to the description of prose, poetry and drama, and students will explore the changing relations between form and meaning in English from the earliest times up to the present. A number of key strands in contemporary language study will also be presented, including semiotic theory, rhetoric and discourse studies and theorizations of the relationship between texts and subjectivity.

ENGL1011 Introduction to Film Studies
How do form and style structure our experience of film? This unit provides a critical introduction to elements of film making and viewing, moving through an exploration of formal components of film to consider film aesthetics in relation to the history of film scholarship. We will consider films in a variety of cultural and historical contexts, from early cinema to youtube, and introduce a series of “case studies” to explore historical, cultural and material contexts of film production and consumption.

ENGL1012 The Gothic Imagination
This unit explores the Gothic, a transgressive literary mode that imagines haunted or hostile social worlds. Beginning with the early Gothic craze and ending with its popular on-screen renewal, we consider the aesthetics of horror and terror, and investigate the questions these texts raise about identity, place, and the imagination.

ENGL1013 Global Literatures in English
Global Literatures in English is a transnational and cross-period unit that examines how literary and cultural works from different periods and different geopolitical contexts engage with Empire and its aftermath.

ENGL1014 Creative Writing
Creative writing, reading and thinking are core skills. This unit offers a practical and critical introduction to the development of a reflective creative writing practice across a range of different literary forms. Students will be guided through the process of generating ideas, drafting, workshopping, editing and revision to produce a portfolio of creative writing. The unit will emphasise creative writing as a dynamic mode of engaging with forms and ideas.

ENGL1026 Constructing the Fictive Self
What makes the subject of identity so compelling? How are we ourselves involved in the construction of such identity? This unit explores the topic of self in a range of texts, both literary and filmic. It will provide an opportunity for students to analyse and interrogate the construction of self in a variety of social contexts by focusing on textual representations of sexuality, race and gender in ways that are relevant to being and living in today’s world.
ENGL2605 Literary Theory: An Introduction
This unit approaches literary theory and criticism as such in three ways, synoptically, historically, and polemically. First, a generous sampling of kinds of theory and criticism establishes the ambit of the field. Second, a more concentrated sampling explores the history and importance of a particular period or mode of theory and criticism. Third, another such sampling evaluates the nature and significance of a matter of current theoretical and critical controversy.

ENGL2611 Jane Austen, Then and Now
Jane Austen is an iconic figure, both within the academy and without. In the discipline of English, her novels consolidate generic traditions that are both forward and backward looking. This unit examines Austen’s novels in their historical and critical context in order to understand the place of her works, then and now. We will analyse how these novels engage the literary, social and political debates of the late eighteenth and early nineteenth century. We will also assess the interpretative traditions her work inaugurated in subsequent centuries.

ENGL2613 Literature, Politics and Modernity
This unit considers the creative interplay between literature and politics in the modern period (1789-1945), introducing and examining how authority, social structures and individual autonomy have been represented and analysed in real and imagined settings. Using an array of forms including novels, poems, documents, essays and film, we look at topics such as revolution, equality, imperialism, the environment and utopias. We track historical changes in how political power has operated and been challenged at the personal, national and global levels.

ENGL2617 Postmodernism
This unit will explore some of the most interesting and innovative theoretical, literary and multimedia texts of the last half century. Some of the topics to be explored include the relationship between modernism and postmodernism; movements, communities and subcultures; experimentalism and activism; small press publishing and independent cinema; politics, history and cultural value; genre, style and intertextuality; auteurism and the ‘death of the author’.

ENGL2638 Literature and Cinema
This unit will examine issues arising from a comparative study of literature and cinema, including: the continuities and discontinuities between the two mediums; the cultural and historical contexts of literary and cinematic texts; authorship, auteurism and aesthetic authority; adaptation and intertextuality; the figurative styles of literature and cinema; narrative and narration in literature and cinema; genre study.

ENGL2653 Western Theories of Language
An introduction to the history of Western ideas about the structure, origin and use of language, with a particular focus on theories of English grammar and on the main theoretical developments of the 20th century. Students will consider the evolution of grammatical and rhetorical thought with reference both to the inherent constraints on linguistic theorizing, and to the varying ideological currents that have shaped Western ideas on language structure and use from antiquity to the present.

ENGL2657 Myths, Legends and Heroes
Students will study (in modern English translation) the literature of the peoples who lived in Britain in the Early Middle Ages -- Britons, Anglo-Saxons, Vikings and Normans. Lectures and tutorials will cover the literature, history, religion and language of these cultures, focusing on representations of the heroic ideal, as this is embodied in mythic, legendary and historical writing. Texts to be studied include Beowulf, The Wanderer, selections from the Edda, and early Arthurian material.

ENGL2666 Creative Writing: Theory and Practice
This unit fosters students’ practice and knowledge of creative writing through interactive workshops, seminars and lectures led by established writers and academics. The emphasis is on writing as a creative mode of intellectual, historical and aesthetic engagement with the contemporary.

ENGL2667 Reading Drama
In this unit, you read some great plays and develop skills in reading dramatic texts. At four or five plays in detail, we consider issues such as: what it means to read dramatic text; the relationship between text and performance; ‘personation’ and the establishment of dramatic character.

ENGL2669 Australian Stage and Screen
Australian theatre and cinema have lived, at times intersecting, histories, and have played significant roles at both national and international levels, from the depiction of various local ‘types’ on stage and screen, to the work of Australian actors, directors and cinematographers overseas. This unit examines selected plays and films over the last century or so through a number of thematic focuses, including: race, gender and national identity; comic traditions; Australia and the world; modernity and innovation.

ENGL2671 Australian Writing in the Postmodern Age
Must one country’s postmodernism look the same as another’s? Must one hemisphere’s? Concentrating upon works written since the 1980s, this unit of study looks at some of the early texts of Australian postmodernism, the domestic and international contexts in which they took seed, and how Australian postmodernism has subsequently developed, asking as it does so whether it has any distinguishing features, trying to explain what these might be, and how they might have come about.

ENGL2672 Postcolonial Modernisms/Modernities
This unit examines literary and cultural expressions of modernism/modernity in sites that were or continue to be colonised. We will study how notions such as race, gender, class, sexuality, nation, and religion shape ideas of being modern, and how 20th and 21st century aesthetic works register the contradictory yet interconnected experiences of modernity.
ENGL3633 Introduction to Old English
Old English was the language of England from the fifth century until the twelfth. This earliest phase of the English literary tradition evolved against a background of cultural encounters: as the Anglo-Saxons encountered the culture of Rome, as they adopted and adapted the Christian religion, and as they reflected on their origins on the European continent. This unit introduces students to the language spoken and written by the Anglo-Saxons, and presents the opportunity to translate and read Old English texts.

ENGL3651 Christopher Marlowe
Christopher Marlowe was a radically creative dramatic and poetic genius whose blockbuster plays changed the course of English drama and paved the way for Shakespeare. His daring themes put Renaissance taboos such as atheism, necromancy, homoeroticism and current politics on stage for public debate. These themes, combined with his trademark obsessive protagonists, mighty poetic line and aesthetics of violence, continue to impress audiences and scholars. This unit is an advanced study of Marlowe’s body of work in the context of his times and modern scholarship.

ENGL3657 The Brontes
The novels of the Bronte Sisters are among the most enduringly popular Victorian texts, yet they have an ambiguous critical status. The perception that the Brontes are labile and cloistered writers, best interpreted psychoanalytically, raises questions about the relationship between biography and literature, and the ways in which notions of social and historical relevance play into judgments about literary value. We will think about canonical and popular literary status, biography and authorship, gender and writing, and Victorian society.

ENGL3695 Medieval Tales of Wonder
Medieval Romance includes narratives of adventure and ideals of courtly love within a context infused with wondrous potential. In this unit students will explore a selection of romance texts, exploring themes of gender, the fantastic and literary history. Students will analyse recent developments in theoretical approaches to Medieval romance, including monster theory and affect theory. Texts will be studied in Middle English with class support.

ENGL3696 Advanced Creative Writing
This unit builds on ENGL2666 Creative Writing: Theory and Practice, offering students the opportunity to complete a creative project. Student may complete projects in fiction, poetry, creative non-fiction, writing for performance, or by combining any of the above.

ENGL3697 Imagining Jerusalem
Jerusalem has long fascinated travellers, artists, and pilgrims, both as a real and as an imagined city. For some, this fascination lies in the religious symbolism of the city, while in the contemporary period Jerusalem is also increasingly shaped by the role it plays in the conflict in the Middle East. This unit focuses on how literature and film from Australia, Europe, Israel, North America, and Palestine imagines Jerusalem as a past, present, and future city.

ENGL3701 Major Authors: Depth Study
This unit provides students with the opportunity to undertake in-depth study of the life, work, career and reception of one or more major Australian writers, such as Peter Carey, Helen Garner, Christina Stead, Patrick White or Judith Wright. While focusing on close reading of texts that have come to be regarded as outstanding both nationally and internationally, students will also use methodologies that include career biography, reception history, and the analysis of key works of literary criticism and the economy of literary prestige.

ENGL3703 Writing Australian Nature
How does writing engage with nature in Australia - its geographic wonders, its layered meanings and its complex human histories? What roles have writers, artists, photographers and others played in creating an environmental consciousness? This unit examines Indigenous and non-Indigenous texts, introducing themes that have shaped and defined Australian literature, past and present. How have Australian nature, place and environment challenged writers? Can literature transform the way we think about or care for the world in which we live?

ENGL3706 African American Literature
We examine a range of African American-authored texts, including films, from the 18th century to the present to consider the relationship of race and writing, and the ways African American cultural expression contributes to and interrogates American cultural history. Issues covered include enslavement and freedom, and segregation and Civil Rights.

ENGL3707 Text, Action, and Ideology
This unit of study explores text-production as a social and ideological act, with particular reference to English-speaking contexts. We will ask how competing social and political interests shape specific textual practices, and consider the ideological influences impinging on theoretical discourse about language and textuality.
Honours

English

An Honours year in English allows you to specialise further in your area of interest. It offers students the opportunity to work independently and creatively in a community of scholars that includes both their peers and the staff of the department. A number of Honours graduates each year continue on to postgraduate study in Australia or abroad. During their Honours year, students will write a thesis of 15,000 words, complete three 4000 level seminar units and participate in the mid-year Honours Conference.

From 2018-2020, acceptance into the Honours program requires a major in English with an average of 70 percent or above. From 2021, acceptance into the Honours program requires a major in English with an average of 70 percent or above and the completion of a second major.

In working on your Honours thesis with an expert in a field of your choice, you will develop skills in independent research that will benefit you in a wide range of career paths: anything that requires skills in research, analysis and argumentation. One of those might be further academic study and, for this, an Honours degree is an important stepping stone. Alongside the thesis, the three seminar options that you choose will deepen your understanding of the subject of English.

The skills that you develop in an Honours degree include analytical thinking; reading, listening to and analysing complex texts and arguments; proficiency in research methods; independence of thought and the capacity to complete a significant writing project. This makes it an excellent qualification for many careers in a world beyond academia that increasingly demands these adaptable skills. This includes fields which have an immediate relationship to literary study, such as publishing and other careers in the arts, but also other professions and vocations for which an analytical mind is crucial: the law, public service, advertising and the media, teaching, politics, as well as business and industry.

For more information, contact the English Department Honours Coordinator.

Honours Thesis Units, Semester 1 & 2

| ENGL4111 English Honours Thesis 1 |
| ENGL4112 English Honours Thesis 2 |

4000-Level

ENGL4111 English Honours Thesis 1
This unit involves research towards and preliminary writing of an Honours thesis of 15000 words, in collaboration with a supervisor approved by the Department of English Honours Coordinator.

ENGL4112 English Honours Thesis 2
In this unit you complete your substantial, independent research project in English. Regular meetings with a supervisor approved by the Department of English Honours Coordinator will guide your progress. You will continue to submit drafts at agreed times and develop your expertise in relevant research methods and analytical skills as well as in the subject matter of your specialist topic.

ENGL4113 Approaches to Critical Reading
This unit introduces students to a variety of critical approaches to literature from the eighteenth century to the present. It asks a number of questions basic to the study and understanding of literature. What does it mean to read a text critically? What roles do critical and theoretical perspectives play in our understanding of literary texts? In addition to developing critical and theoretical literacy, the unit will examine how such strategies may be brought to bear on reading literary texts and whether they are effective and/or appropriate in specific cases.

ENGL4114 Approaches to Literary Theory
How do literary texts relate to history? When we divide time into different periods, what are the implications for interpretation? Focusing on one or two literary periods, this unit introduces students to historicist literary criticism, developing skills in relating literature to historical context. We read key texts from the designated period(s), conduct research into appropriate archives (including online databases), and identify the theoretical questions that underpin those investigations.

ENGL4115 Approaches to Global English Literatures
Students will familiarise themselves with critical approaches to a range of literary works written throughout the world in the English language, and they will critically examine ways in which theories of globalization and place have come to inflect paradigms of local and national identity.

ENGL4116 Approaches to Genre
Students will familiarise themselves with critical approaches to a range of literary works written throughout the world in the English language, and they will critically examine ways in which theories of globalization and place have come to inflect paradigms of local and national identity.

ENGL4117 Henry James and the Art of Fiction
In addition to writing distinctive short stories and novels, Henry James was a voluminous critic whose writings on the art of fiction have shaped modern approaches to the novel. In this unit, we take a chronological approach, reading selections from James’ critical writings alongside his novels and tales to compare the author’s evolving theory of fiction with his practice of it. Matters of special interest include Anglo-American literary culture; strategies of characterisation and narration; experiments in literary style; the purpose of criticism; and the ethics of representation.

ENGL4118 Modern Australian Poetry and Poetics
This unit explores the history, contexts and variety of modern and contemporary Australian poetry, with particular focus on the question of modernism. Students will study a selection of key Australian poets and statements about poetry from 1900 to the present.

ENGL4119 Shakespeare and his Contemporaries
The unit explores important works by Shakespeare and his contemporaries in the contexts of late-sixteenth- and early-seventeenth-century England. The unit will analyse the texts and authors in relation to one another to uncover key discourses of the period relating to politics, humanism, drama, poetry, gender and genre. Students will gain valuable insights into the literary and cultural richness of the period and come to a deeper understanding of Shakespeare’s relevance and significance in his day.

ENGL4121 The Secret History of the Novel

The English novel emerged as a distinct genre in the eighteenth century. This unit investigates its development and circulation, analysing novels that have since been canonised as well as material usually excluded from the story of the novel’s rise. We aim at a more complex understanding of the novel as a historical genre as well as the roots of its contemporary appeal.

ENGL4122 Critical Contexts for Creative Writing

This unit will further develop your understanding of how creative writing connects with major scholarly and critical debates in literary and cultural theory. Focusing in particular on writers whose work is both creative and theoretical, the unit will examine: theories of authorship; the history of the book; the ethics and politics of writing; aesthetic hierarchy and value; close and distant reading; form, genre and style; writing, sex and embodiment.
Film Studies Major and Minor

Film Studies at Sydney University is an interdisciplinary program coordinated jointly by the Department of Art History and the Department of English.

Studying film draws on both our intellect and our imagination. As an accessible and even ubiquitous transnational cultural form, film opens us to other worlds, other lives, other ways of seeing.

People have been making, watching and writing about movies for over a century. In a culture that increasingly relies on visual information, an understanding of the moving image is essential to understanding society. The major in Film Studies is a vibrant interdisciplinary program that develops this critical visual literacy. It equips you with a range of skills for understanding and analysing cinema as a vital and yet everyday part of modern life. Through close familiarity with a range of case studies, you will come to understand the social, cultural, aesthetic and political dimensions of cinema in different contexts and at different times.

In Film Studies you will learn scholarly terms that will enable you to describe what you see on screen in relation to, for instance, camera movements and editing techniques or traditions of screen performance. You will develop rich understandings of concepts such as national cinema, genre and spectatorship through a diverse range of case studies. And you will study the historical development of film as a cultural and technological form and analyse its transformations across the 20th century to the present day.

First year

At junior level students complete two units of study, ENGL1011 Introduction to Film Studies, where they are introduced to the language of cinema, film history and the field of critical and theoretical scholarship in Film Studies, and ARHT1003 Hollywood: Art, Industry, Entertainment, which will explore the central cultural role Hollywood and its products have played in the history and aesthetics of filmmaking. In this first year of their major students will acquire a knowledge of key terms, concepts, and critical approaches to the discipline, and will learn to apply the skills of formal film analysis and interpretation, providing them with a firm intellectual grounding for advanced study in a range of subject areas in their senior years.

Second year

In their second year, students will expand on the knowledge gained at junior level, beginning with the core unit ARHT2652 From Silent to Sound Cinema. This course offers a sustained study of the emergence of cinema across the twentieth century as art form, entertainment commodity, social institution and cultural experience via case studies focused on aspects such as industry development, genre, stardom, reception, national cinemas and film movements. Students will then have the opportunity to branch out into other areas of inquiry through a wide range of 2000 level selectives that offer different perspectives on the history of cinema as a medium, on the nature of cinematic experience, on the variety of cinematic cultures, and on specific approaches to and debates within contemporary Film Studies.

Third year

In the final year of their major students will have the opportunity to reflect on the discipline of Film Studies from a contemporary perspective in the core unit ARHT3601 Cinematic Transformations, which traces the evolution of the cinematic object from the celluloid to the digital object. They will also be introduced to understandings of cinema arrived at from interdisciplinary perspectives through projects framed within the FASS3999 Interdisciplinary Unit, giving them a wider grasp of cinema as a cultural phenomenon. Two other 3000 level courses are also completed to round out the major, and these will be drawn from a pool of units offering more sophisticated studies of topics such as film genres, national cinemas, documentary, and digital arts.

Fourth Year

If you would like to deepen your knowledge and skills in this major, you can complete an additional year combining your Bachelor of Arts degree with the new Bachelor of Advanced Studies. In the Bachelor of Advanced Studies, you can undertake advanced coursework, complete a second major, combine studies from a range of disciplines and get involved in cross-disciplinary community, professional, research or entrepreneurial project work.

Honours

Film Studies

The Honours year comprises two semester-long units of study and a thesis of 18,000–20,000 words in length. From 2018-2020, acceptance into the Honours program requires a major in Film Studies with an average of 70 percent or above. From 2021, acceptance into the Honours program requires a major in Film Studies with an average of 70 percent or above and the completion of a second major. For more information, contact the Film Studies Honours Coordinator.

Requirements for Completion

FILM4113
What is Cinema Studies
Many scholars take Andre Bazin’s four-volume work, “Qu’est-ce que le cinema?”, as the moment of inauguration for the critical project of film studies. Echoing Bazin’s famous question, this seminar investigates what it means to take cinema as a scholarly object. Covering materials from early cinema to post-cinema, this seminar is organised around a series of mutually informing concepts that have structured film studies scholarship: disciplinarity, temporality, realism, indexicality, sound, spectatorship and digitality.

FILM4114
The Cinematic Experience
What is the cinematic experience today, in an age of fragmented audiences and multiple platform delivery? Taking the film festival as its central case study, this unit examines the festival as a cultural institution, as a site for the making of film history, and as a scene of the curious mixture of the festive and the cerebral, the sensual and the serious.
Celtic Studies Minor

A minor in Celtic Studies is centred in the study of the languages, history and culture of the Celtic-speaking peoples from prehistory to the present. This ethnic group has played a highly significant role in the development of European civilisation, particularly in the British Isles. The Celts may be defined as those peoples who speak or whose forebears have spoken a Celtic language. Early Celtic languages included Celtiberian and Gaulish in ancient continental Europe, Galatian in Asia Minor, as well as British, Goidelic and Pictish in the British Isles. Breton, Irish, Scottish Gaelic and Welsh are the Celtic languages spoken today.

Candidates for the minor take core units in study of Celtic identity and historical influence of the Celtic peoples and Celtic narrative literature. Celtic language units (Irish, Scottish Gaelic and Welsh) develop knowledge of language itself and enhance access to cultural and literary studies. Optional units include further language units. The aim is to enable students who have developed an interest in various aspects of Celtic Studies to pursue study that offers a representative range of subject areas, developing skills and knowledge in the study of a subject that is highly significant to European as well as Australian cultural heritage.

Requirements for Completion

A minor in Celtic Studies requires 36 credit points from the unit of study table including:

(i) 6 credit points of 1000-level core units

CLST1000 Defining the Celts
The ‘Celts’ are any of those peoples of Europe who speak or spoke a Celtic language. By the Iron Age the Celtic peoples were spread across Europe and across the course of millennia have given rise to a number of European nations and cultures—including the Irish, the Welsh and the Bretons. This unit explores definitions of the Celts, examining their history and development, and provides an overview of their languages.

2000-Level

CLST2605 Celts in History
Finding the Celts in History from c.500 B.C. to the present raises issues of the extent of invasion or migration that has occurred in the past and its role in cultural change, indeed the very nature of cultural change itself. These will be addressed from written sources, material remains and genetic evidence. While this unit stands on its own, its topics have been carefully selected to allow students who have done CLST2601 to explore further the Celtic world.

CLST2608 Modern Welsh Language and Culture 1
The Welsh language has one of the oldest literary traditions in Europe. This unit will introduce students to this culture by providing them with the basic structure and vocabulary of the language, with an emphasis on the acquisition of oral and written skills of communication through functionally oriented language activities. The language will be studied in the context of Welsh history, literature and society.

CLST2613 Scottish Gaelic Language and Culture 1
The Scottish Gaelic language has a very old literary tradition. This unit will introduce students to this culture by providing them with the basic structure and vocabulary of the language, with an emphasis on the acquisition of oral and written skills of communication through functionally oriented language activities. The language will be studied in the context of Scottish history, literature and society.

3000-Level

CLST3614 Middle Welsh
Middle Welsh was the language spoken and written in Wales in the Middle Ages (from about the 12th to the 14th Century). The most famous text surviving in Middle Welsh is the Mabinogion, a compilation of mythical and legendary material often of much earlier date. In this unit students will develop a knowledge of Middle Welsh grammar and vocabulary and learn to read and interpret texts in Middle Welsh.

CLST3615 Old Irish
Old Irish was the language spoken and written in Ireland in the early Middle Ages, and is preserved in a range of records, from Ogham stones to manuscripts. In this unit students will develop a knowledge of Old Irish grammar and vocabulary, and learn to read texts in Old Irish. It will also provide a basic introduction to the development of the Irish language in its early historic context, with reference to examples from inscriptions, manuscripts and the different genres of literature.

CLST3616 The Celtic Otherworld
This unit looks closely at one of the most influential narrative types in medieval Celtic literature. We will examine a series of texts (in translation) and place them in the context of early Irish and Welsh conceptions of cosmology, landscape and pilgrimage: including stories of the voyage tales or Bran, Brendan and Mael Duinn, the vision of St Fursey, and the otherworld episodes in the Welsh Mabinogi.
Postgraduate Coursework Program

English Studies

The Master of English Studies (MES) is one of Australia’s premier postgraduate coursework degrees in English studies. It attracts local and international students who seek a comprehensive and highly regarded coursework degree in English literature and who may also be using the MES as a stepping stone to entering doctoral studies in Australia or overseas. English teachers find the MES an excellent way to enrich their subject knowledge and develop their love of literature. Furthermore, teachers in New South Wales may apply to the Board of Studies, Teaching and Educational Standards to claim a proportion of their coursework hours as recognized professional learning.

The Master of English Studies offers graduates opportunities to pursue or advance careers in any vocation or area that demands intellectual flexibility and versatility, critical thinking and the ability to communicate such as teaching, the media, public and community service, and academia. This course brings together contemporary critical theory with literary narratives to investigate how and why literature continues to enjoy particular resonance in a twenty-first-century environment. It focuses on four core critical approaches — critical reading, literary history, genre, and literary comparison, including the question of English as a world literature. Part of this program’s aim is to consider ways in which the study of literature in English works in a specifically Australian cultural context. In this sense, the program is aligned with the contemporary repositioning of Australia in relation to “the Asian century” and to global culture more generally. Building on Australia’s long-established international reputation in Cultural Studies, this program also seeks to expand consideration of literary as well as cultural narratives across a broad transnational framework. It provides an excellent foundation for research students, both from Australia and overseas, who wish to reconsider literature in English within a dynamically expanding global field.

Synergies with the Master of Creative Writing also allow students to explore various forms of contemporary writing practice and to engage with a lively series of visiting speakers from the active community of writers in Sydney and abroad. Students in the Master of English Studies can, if they choose, take creative writing units of study.
English Studies 2018

This program is offered at Graduate Certificate (0.5 year full-time), Graduate Diploma (1 year full-time) and Master (1.5 years full-time) levels. Part-time study is also available.
A 1 year option for the Master degree is available to applicants with a Graduate Certificate /Graduate Diploma in the program with a minimum credit average or an Honours degree in a relevant discipline.

Creative Writing

The Master of Creative Writing is designed for new, developing and established writers who wish to explore and develop their creative practice in a stimulating academic environment. We welcome students who work in experimental or traditional ways within, across or between genres and media. As well as core units in the fundamentals of research-led creative practice, critical contexts for creative writing, and Sydney as a cultural centre, we offer a wide range of specialised units, including Introductory and Advanced Workshops in Poetry, Fiction, Non-fiction, Writers at Work units, and Major Movements units. Throughout their degree, students work in small groups with distinguished staff and visitors to extend and deepen their skills, their thinking, and their engagement with the work of others. As well as coursework, all Masters students undertake a substantial, individually supervised creative project and participate in a lively calendar of readings, talks and symposia. Writers currently on staff include Judith Beveridge, Peter Kirkpatrick, Kate Lilley, Fiona McFarlane, Peter Minter and Beth Yahp. Visitors to the program in recent years have included Peter Boyle, Pam Brown, Ali Cobby Eckermann, Carla Harryman, Lyn Hejinian, Bob Holman, Gail Jones, Michelle de Kretser, David Malouf, Fiona McFarlane, Drusilla Modjeska, Lionel Shriver, Katherine Thompson, John Tranter, Barrett Watten and John Wilkinson.

ENGL6040
Introduction to Old English
Old English was the language of England from the fifth century until the twelfth. This earliest phase of the English literary tradition evolved against a background of cultural encounters: as the Anglo-Saxons encountered the culture of Rome, as they adopted and adapted the Christian religion, and as they reflected on their origins on the European continent. This unit introduces students to the language spoken and written by the Anglo-Saxons, and presents the opportunity to translate and read Old English texts.

ENGL6100 Approaches to Literary History
This is a core unit for the Master of English Studies. How do literary texts relate to history? When we divide time into different periods (“Renaissance” “Romantic” “Modernist” etc.), what are the implications for interpretation? Focusing on one or two literary periods, this core unit for the Master of English Studies introduces students to historicist literary criticism, developing skills in relating literature to historical context. We read key texts from the designated period(s), conduct research into appropriate archives (including online databases), and identify the theoretical questions that underpin those investigations.

ENGL6101 Approaches to Genre
This is a core unit for the Master of English Studies. In this unit students will critically examine significant theoretical definitions of and debates about genre through time. They will apply an advanced understanding of genres (or ‘kinds’ or ‘forms’) to representative and problematic texts in order to develop a deep appreciation of the function, limitations and transformations of genre in literature. The complex relationship between formal properties, creativity and historical context will be explored.
ENGL6102 Approaches to Critical Reading

This is a core unit for the Master of English Studies. This unit will introduce students to a variety of critical approaches to literature. In addition to developing critical and theoretical literacy, the unit aims to develop advanced skills in identifying how and why such strategies might be brought to bear on reading literary texts, and to evaluate how effective and/or appropriate such strategies might be in specific cases. The unit also aims to critically examine theories of the text as a physical and conceptual object.

ENGL6103 Approaches to Global English Literatures

This is a core unit for the Master of English Studies. Students will familiarise themselves with critical approaches to a range of literary works written throughout the world in the English language, and they will critically examine ways in which theories of globalisation and place have come to inflect paradigms of local and national identity. Students will evaluate contemporary understandings of the meaning and significance of “English” literature in a new global environment.

ENGL6108 Modern Australian Poetry and Poetics

Critical discussion of Australian poetry has long been preoccupied by the status of its modernism, as a function of wider questions regarding the meaning of Australian modernity. Was modernism only belatedly taken up in the 1970s, or were certain older Australian poets modernist avant la lettre? In this unit students will evaluate a selection of key poems and statements about poetry by Australian writers from 1900 to the present, taking in themes such as: Romantic absence and negativity, the Symbolist inheritance, high and vernacular modernisms, avant gardism and reaction, the Generation of 68, and the fate of postmodernism.

ENGL6110 The Secret History of the Novel

The English novel emerged as a distinct genre in the eighteenth century. This unit investigates its development and circulation, analysing novels that have since been canonised as well as material usually excluded from the story of the novel’s rise. We aim at a more complex understanding of the novel as a historical genre as well as the roots of its contemporary appeal.

ENGL6119 Dissertation Part 1: Creative Writing

Research and writing towards a 12-15,000 word dissertation comprising of a larger creative and smaller critical/exegetical component. This is a capstone unit of the Master of Creative Writing degree. Candidates must formulate a topic and consult with the Unit Coordinator in advance of enrollment in order to be assigned appropriate supervision by an academic staff member. Must be followed by enrollment in ENGL6120 Dissertation Part 2: Creative Writing.

ENGL6120 Dissertation Part 2: Creative Writing

Completion and submission of a 12-15,000 word dissertation comprising of a larger creative and smaller critical/exegetical component. This is a capstone unit of the Master of Creative Writing degree. Candidates must have formulated a topic and consulted with the Unit Coordinator in advance of enrollment in the preceding unit, ENGL6119 Dissertation Part 1: Creative Writing, in order to have been assigned appropriate supervision by an academic staff member.

ENGL6901 Creative Writing: Fiction Workshop

This unit introduces students to the practice, craft skills and critical reflection involved in writing fiction (particularly the short story form). Narrative writing skills will be explored and developed through close readings of a range of short fiction, as well as in-class and at-home writing exercises, building towards more sustained pieces of work. Writing and critical skills are developed through discussion and participation in the workshop process, focusing on reading and creative strategies to generate new material as well as processes of editing and revision.

ENGL6902 Creative Writing: Poetry Workshop

This unit of study is a workshop in writing poetry conducted by a distinguished poet. Students are required to produce their own works throughout the unit and these works will provide the basis for constructive discussion aimed at developing different methods of writing.

ENGL6908 Creative Writing: Supervised Project

This unit will enable approved candidates to pursue an extended creative project under the supervision of an established author, poet, script- or children’s writer. Students will be expected to discuss and plan the project with their supervisor, then submit drafted material to an agreed timetable, and to discuss this drafted material with their supervisor before submitting a revised final draft.

ENGL6913 Critical Contexts for Creative Writing

This unit is a compulsory core unit in the Master of Creative Writing. It complements the other core units by focussing on how creative writing connects with major scholarly and critical debates in literary and cultural theory, focusing in particular on writers, like Susan Sontag, whose work is both creative and theoretical. Indicative topics include: theories of authorship; the history of the book; the ethics and politics of writing; aesthetic hierarchy and value; close and distant reading; form, genre and style; writing, sex and embodiment.

ENGL6914 Research Methods for Creative Writing

This unit is designed to introduce the principles of practice-led research and research-led practice. We will consider what it means to pursue creative writing in an academic environment. It will equip students with the skills necessary to create individual projects and conduct creative research. Seminars will focus on building research skills, formulating individual projects and considering the means and ends of creative research.
ENGL6917 Literary Culture: Sydney
This unit explores Sydney as a significant literary city in the context of influential debates on community, cosmopolitanism and the poetics of place. We will read key Sydney texts and explore Sydney’s major cultural institutions and events, including the Sydney Writers’ Festival. Students will produce their own creative project in response to Sydney and its storied locales.

ENGL6929 Dissertation Part 1
Research and writing towards a 12000 word dissertation. Candidates must formulate a topic and seek permission for enrolment from the Postgraduate Coordinator. Approval is subject to availability of appropriate supervision by an academic staff member. Must be followed by enrolment in ENGL6930.

ENGL6930 Dissertation Part 2
Completion and submission of a 12000 word dissertation. Candidates must formulate a topic and seek permission for enrolment in the preceding unit, ENGL6929, from the Postgraduate Coordinator. Approval is subject to availability of appropriate supervision by an academic staff member.

ENGL6935 Research Essay
In this unit of study students will workshop, plan and execute their own research based project. They will participate in a series of specialised research seminars in which they will integrate their previous learning with research skills. This will culminate in a project that engages with the current state of the field while reflecting on their encounter with the discipline.

ENGL6936 Writers at Work
This unit focuses attention on the work of writing from the perspective of writers. What kinds of labour are entailed in literary production and publication? What does it mean to describe oneself, or be described, as a writer? Who does a writer work for and what processes produce the literary work as we encounter it? What about ‘writer’s block’? We will explore different aspects, contexts and genres of writers at work through a mixture of detailed case studies and representations, always with an eye to relations between particular writers, works and readers.

ENGL6937 Literary Movements
This unit introduces students to literary movements as a way of thinking about literary texts and their reception in terms of processes broader than any individual author or work. Claims to movement status are inherently polemical. They can emerge from within a community in the form of manifestos and collaborative publications or describe more diffuse networks and alliances. Through case studies we will consider what is at stake in the designation and commodification of literary movements and what benefits or problems flow from such claims.

ENGL6970 Reading Magazines
This unit celebrates magazines as an important but often over-looked part of Australian print and digital culture. Starting with an overview of the history of print culture in Australia and the role of iconic magazines like the Bulletin and Women’s Weekly in constructing literary and popular culture, we then examine a cross-section of publications from ‘little’ literary magazines to fashion, gossip, sports, special-interest, custom and online magazines.

ENGL6984 Creative Non-Fiction Workshop
This unit of study introduces students to the principles and practices of creative non-fiction, also known as literary journalism. This diverse genre includes travel, memoir, biography, essays, historical, medical or investigative narratives. The unit provides a scholarly framework to creative non-fiction and the work of writers such as essayists and literary journalists. In addition to the content provided by the coordinators, three major contemporary non-fiction writers take participants through the process of composition of their recent works.

ENGL6985 Shakespeare and his Contemporaries
The unit explores important works by Shakespeare and his contemporaries in the contexts of late-sixteenth- and early-seventeenth-century England. The unit will analyse the texts and authors in relation to one another to uncover key discourses of the period relating to politics, humanism, drama, poetry, gender and genre. Students will gain valuable insights into the literary and cultural richness of the period and come to a deeper understanding of Shakespeare’s relevance and significance in his day.

ENGL6986 Advanced Workshop: Poetry
This unit is designed for students who have already begun the practice of writing poetry, and who wish to work on a large portfolio of poems which has been developed to an advanced stage of composition. In the seminars, students will use this portfolio to refine and develop their writing style and technique in dialogue with the seminar leader.

ENGL6987 Advanced Workshop: Novel
This unit builds on the introductory creative writing fiction workshop ENGL6901 and assumes that students are familiar with the craft skills, writing practice and critical reflection involved in producing quality fiction. The focus is on developing narrative writing skills toward the production of larger prose forms (a novel or linked stories), through writing exercises, critical reading, the workshop process, and exposure to advanced areas of writing craft. Students also learn to develop a sustainable writing practice, present their project and engage in processes of critiquing, editing and revision.
ENGL6992 Henry James and the Art of Fiction

In addition to writing distinctive short stories and novels, Henry James was a voluminous critic whose writings on the art of fiction have shaped modern approaches to the novel. In this unit, we read selections from James’s critical writings alongside his novels and tales to compare the author’s evolving theory of fiction with his practice of it. Matters of special interest include Anglo-American literary culture; strategies of characterization and narration; experiments in literary style; the purpose of fiction; and the ethics of representation.

Film Studies

Postgraduate Coursework

Film Studies does not offer any postgraduate coursework programs. However, film units such as those listed below from the Film Studies table may be taken by postgraduate students as electives towards their areas of study.

ARHT6925 Cinematographic Performance
ARHT6930 Film Theory: Art, Industry, Culture
ARHT6939 The Documentary Film
ARHT6954 The Great Film Directors

The following unit is available in 2018:

ARHT6930 Film Theory: Art, Industry, Culture

The relation of film to industrial modernity is an ongoing issue for film theorists. With the advent of digital image processes and production the relation of art and industry has re-emerged with a new set of problems. How do we conceptualise the new forms? What theoretical and aesthetic language(s) do we draw on? And how best to rethink film in the face of rapid technological, formal and cultural change? These issues will be investigated via an examination of the history of film theory’s attempts to formulate concepts adequate to the age of industrial modernity.

Celtic Studies

Postgraduate Coursework

Celtic Studies does not offer any postgraduate coursework degree programs. However, the following units of study are offered to postgraduate students as electives towards their areas of study, both available in 2018:

CLST6007 Old Irish 1

Old Irish was the language spoken and written in Ireland in the early Middle Ages, and is preserved in a range of records, from Ogham stones to manuscripts. In this unit students will develop a knowledge of Old Irish grammar and vocabulary, and learn to read texts in Old Irish.

CLST6012 Middle Welsh 1

Middle Welsh was the language spoken and written in Wales in the Middle Ages (from about the twelfth to the fourteenth century). The most famous text surviving in Middle Welsh is the Mabinogion, a compilation of mythical and legendary material often of much earlier date. In this unit students will develop a knowledge of Middle Welsh grammar and vocabulary, and learn to read texts in Middle Welsh.
Postgraduate Program

English, Australian Literature and Creative Writing

Research Degrees

The Department offers the following postgraduate research degrees:

Doctor of Arts
Doctor of Philosophy (PhD)
Master of Philosophy (MPhil)
Master of Arts (Research)

Around 100 students are enrolled in research degrees in the Department of English at the University of Sydney. On application for a research degree, the availability of an appropriate supervisor must be taken into consideration. Funding is available on a competitive basis to assist research students with travel to archives and to academic conferences. The postgraduate program is also affiliated with the Institute of World Literature run out of Harvard University, and sends two students to the IWL’s summer seminars annually. Graduates from our postgraduate research program currently teach at a variety of universities both locally (University of New South Wales, University of Western Sydney, Macquarie, Australian Catholic University), nationally (University of Queensland, Murdoch, James Cook University, University of New England), and around the world (Oxford, Durham, King’s College, London). Further information, including details of application procedures, can be found on the Department website at: http://sydney.edu.au/arts/english/postgrad_research/

Celtic Studies

Research Degrees

The Department offers the following postgraduate research degrees:

Doctor of Philosophy (PhD)
Master of Philosophy (MPhil)
Master of Arts (Research)

Celtic Studies offers a wide choice of topics for research, ranging from the early history of the Celts in Europe to the present situation of the Celtic languages in the British Isles, Brittany and beyond. The research can focus on a number of disciplinary aspects, including language and linguistics, archaeology, history, literature and folklore as well as music. With the exception of elective Old Irish and Middle Welsh language courses (CLST6007 and CLST6012) offered to postgraduate students, all work towards master's degrees and doctorates in Celtic Studies is assessed by thesis only.

Department of English Staff

Associate Professor Daniel Anlezark
daniel.anlezark@sydney.edu.au
Dan researches and teaches in the area of Old and Middle English language and literature, with particular interest in the literary reception of the Bible and the literature of Classical antiquity by the Anglo-Saxons. He has published on and edited a range of Old English texts, and is also interested in the relationship between Old English and Old Norse literature. He teaches widely across the literature of the Middle Ages, and welcomes research students interested in texts and ideas from across the period.

Judith Beveridge
judith.beveridge@sydney.edu.au
Judith Beveridge teaches poetry writing at postgraduate level. She has published four books of poetry, all of which have won major prizes and the most recent of which are, Devadatta’s Poems, and Hook and Eye: a Selection of Poems. This latter volume is for a US audience. She is the poetry editor for the literary journal Meanjin and her poems have been translated into several languages and studied in schools and universities. She writes extensively on Australian poetry.

Associate Professor Mark Byron
mark.byron@sydney.edu.au
Mark teaches across the genres and practices of Modernism: prose, poetry, drama, and film, as well as textual and editorial theory. His current work is in developing digital scholarly editions of complex Modernist texts and their manuscripts, including the Watt module of the Samuel Beckett Digital Manuscript Project. His work also deals with critical and theoretical reflection upon scholarly editing techniques.

Dr Anthony Cordingley
anthony.cordingley@sydney.edu.au
Anthony Cordingley is an Australian Research Council Discovery Early Career Research Fellow (DECRA). He has published widely on modern literature, especially Samuel Beckett, and translation.

Professor Robert Dixon
