

The Ross Chambers Award for Honours Publications in Gender and Cultural Studies

Purpose: This award has been made by Professor Ross Chambers with the aim of encouraging bright students to undertake postgraduate studies.

Amount: Four awards @ $250 per award.

Conditions: This award is to recognise and support the achievements of Honours students who have successfully secured a publication in a refereed scholarly journal (excluding book reviewing).

Eligibility: This award is open to any student who has completed Honours in the Department of Gender and Cultural Studies at the University of Sydney from 2013 onwards and who is no more than 4 years past the date of completion or has been enrolled in a postgraduate degree for no more than 1 year – whichever is sooner. An individual student may not receive the award more than once.

Duration: The award will be offered whenever an eligible applicant successfully applies, until the allocated sum is used, at which point it will expire.

Application Process: There is no set date for applying. A student wishing to apply should contact the Honours convenor of the Department of Gender and Cultural Studies, attaching a copy of their forthcoming/in-press/published article, along with evidence of its acceptance (if it is not yet published), and evidence that the place of publication is a peer-reviewed scholarly journal.

Publicity: The award will be promoted on the Honours pages of the Department's website. Students will also be notified of its existence at the commencement of their Honours candidature and at the point of thesis submission.
