FASS HONOURS RESEARCH FELLOWSHIPS

The Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences at the University of Sydney is pleased to announce the introduction of 9 Honours Research Fellowships to be awarded to outstanding undergraduates intending to undertake an Honours year in 2015.

The successful applicants will be offered supervision towards an Honours degree in the appropriate discipline. They will each receive a bursary of $3000 towards research costs, and the opportunity to take up a ‘research internship’ with the supervising program. In appropriate cases, they might also be mentored towards publication of at least one article from the thesis. We anticipate awarding 9 scholarships in 2015.

Applications are now open for fellowships to be taken up in 2015 in the following fields:

For Fellowships sponsored by the Laureate Research Program in International History, a major in History is required. For further inquiries please contact Prof. Glenda Sluga, glenda.sluga@sydney.edu.au

- Research in the history of international organizations and economics
- Research on women historians in twentieth century Australia
- Research on women artists, patrons, collectors and/or art writers during the long eighteenth century (a major in Art History is required)
- Research in Ancient Greek History, with a possible focus on the role of women in ancient Greek religion (a major in Classics and/or Ancient history is required)
- Research on women in Philosophy (a major in Philosophy is required)
For Fellowships sponsored by Race and Ethnicity in the Global South, a major in History is usually required. For further inquiries please contact Prof. Warwick Anderson, warwick.anderson@sydney.edu.au

- Research topics in the history of racial thought or racial science, the history of the biosciences, the history of medicine, or Pacific History

For Fellowships sponsored by the Sydney Intellectual History Network, a relevant Humanities major is required. Research projects will ideally be based in Art History, English, History, Italian Studies, Germanic Studies or Philosophy. For further inquiries or projects to be based in other disciplines, please contact Prof. Jennifer Milam, jennifer.milam@sydney.edu.au

- Research topics in eighteenth-century studies
- Research topics in intellectual history or the history of ideas

For Fellowships sponsored by the Sydney Environment Institute, a major in Humanities or Social Sciences relevant to the topic is required. For further inquiries please contact Prof. David Schlosberg, david.schlosberg@sydney.edu.au

- Research topics in the areas of food, climate change, animal studies, maricultures, cities, environmental humanities, or sustainable business.

Applications should include the following information:
- your current degree status, including subject major, and preferred topic area;
- a short cv, including an up-to-date copy of your marks;
- a one-page statement on your reasons for undertaking Honours and your research interests.

Applicants are also advised to contact the relevant person as listed above to discuss their suitability and possible research topic.

The deadline for Fellowship applications is 15 November 2014. All Fellowship applications should be sent as a single pdf or Word document to Martin King (martin.king@sydney.edu.au).
All successful applicants must meet the conditions for entry into the FASS Honours program of their disciplinary major. They need to apply through the Faculty, as well as seek further details on the requirements and deadlines from the relevant department.
