Are you a third-year Media, Creative Writing or English student looking for hands-on writing experience at Australia’s largest literary festival?

The Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences is on the lookout for a team of six talented interns to assist at our Sydney Writers’ Festival (SWF) ‘Media Hub’ from 24 – 28 May 2017.

The Media Hub is an exciting initiative as part of the University of Sydney’s renewed partnership with the SWF in 2017. Interns will be based right in the heart of the action at the Walsh Bay Precinct.

Media Hub Interns will:

- Create dynamic media content such as session reviews, author interviews, blog entries, podcasts and news stories
- Contribute to University social media channels (Facebook, Instagram, Snapchat, Twitter)
- Take photos/videos of the Sydney Writers’ Festival atmosphere/events
- Assist with the University’s on-site marketing activities

This is a fantastic opportunity to build your portfolio, get published and gain practical experience at one of Australia’s premier cultural events.

Podcasting Interns

Interested in sound editing, podcasting and radio? We also have 5 positions available to specifically help SWF edit their event podcasts on-site working with their sound team.

What to expect

These internships require a commitment of 4-5 days over the festival period, with some flexibility to work around University timetables available. Successful interns will be given media training in web publishing and podcasting in the lead-up to the festival.

To learn more about what to expect as a SWF Media Hub intern, check out this video from the 2016 festival.

How to apply

To be considered for these role, email your CV (max 3 pages) and cover letter to Kate Mayor: kate.mayor@sydney.edu.au and/or Bella Dinhvu: isabella.dinhvu@sydney.edu.au by 5pm, Monday 1 May 2017.

To find out more about our SWF partnership and watch a video of our Media Hub Interns in action, visit sydney.edu.au/arts/sydney_writers_festival