

The Discipline of Accounting Mission Statement

The Discipline of Accounting within the University of Sydney Business School seeks to build and sustain a leading learning community in Australia and its region that exemplifies cutting edge teaching and research which continually serves to:

- attract students with entry credentials indicative of a capacity of high level learning;
- attract qualifying international students to the Discipline of Accounting with a view to injecting its programs with cultural awareness and the richness of cultural diversity;
- attract quality graduates in accounting from other national and international institutions to undertake an accounting PhD or Masters;
- develop students who aspire to make a contribution to the intellectual and professional fabric of the Discipline of Accounting;
- produce graduates in accounting who possess the technical knowledge, generic skills and who embrace ethical standards, desired by the profession and potential employers;
- prepare our outstanding graduate students for research careers in fields of exceptional academic merit.

In brief, the mission of the Discipline of Accounting therefore contributes, through accounting education, research, scholarship and community service, to the achievement of the broader mission of the University of Sydney Business School, namely to build and sustain the leading learning community in business and government in Australia and the region.
