March 2013

Research Seminar: Teaching large classes

On 28 March, ITL will be holding a research seminar on large class teaching. Papers will include a presentation from Professor Michael Prosser on “Variation in Approaches to Teaching in Large Classes” in which he talks of the relations between teaching and learning in large classes, and describes how more effective teaching approaches can be manifest. The seminar will be held in Carslaw Room 354 from 11am to 12pm.

This is the first of a series of seminars held monthly in the ITL, and focusing on research into teaching and learning. Throughout the year, research conducted by staff in the ITL, Learning Centre, eLearning, Maths Learning Centre, and by research higher degree students will be discussed. If you wish to attend this first seminar, receive information on the program for the remainder of 2013, or request a slot to present your own teaching and learning research, please register on the ITL website.
