Working with the Abused or Neglected Child in the Classroom

Thursday 8 May 2008, 8.30am–4pm
Education Building, the University of Sydney, Camperdown

FOR TEACHERS K–12, SCHOOL PRINCIPALS AND OTHER EDUCATION PERSONNEL

CONTENT & FORMAT

This course will explain the multiple levels of intervention in the classroom context that are necessary to assist the child who may have been abused or is at risk of abuse or harm.

Through formal presentations, workshops and group discussion it will provide strategies for enhancing safety, welfare and wellbeing at both prevention and intervention levels. These include:

• developing classroom strategies with children and young people who display challenging behaviours, and
• further developing a school culture where children and young people feel safe.

PRESENTERS

Dr Fran Waugh is a senior lecturer in the School of Social Work and Policy Studies at the University of Sydney, teaching in both the undergraduate and postgraduate Social Work programs. Her focus on practice research in areas of national priorities such as child emotional abuse, child protection and domestic violence, paediatric palliative care and older people with dementia, is drawn from rigorous and often difficult engagement with these vulnerable and at-risk groups. Her PhD research focused on the work practices of statutory child protection workers in New South Wales in responding to emotional abuse notifications. Fran has an extensive practice background working in community health, family support and in child protection in both health and welfare settings.

Denise Lynch is a lecturer in the School of Social Work and Policy Studies. Previously she worked for 13 years with the NSW Department of Community Services in service provision, middle management and senior management in the area of child protection and child welfare more broadly. Before working at the university she conducted consultancy work with a number of welfare organisations and welfare related areas. At the university Denise has developed curriculum around interpersonal violence and social justice and has taught in the areas of family violence, social justice and skills workshop at undergraduate level.
