The Undergraduate Scholarship in Aeronautical/Aerospace Engineering in the Faculty of Engineering and Information Technologies was established in 2014 by a generous donor to assist students within the Faculty at the University of Sydney.

To be eligible, an applicants must:
- Be an Australian citizen or Australian permanent resident.
- be either from a low-socio-economic background, or of Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander descent,
- preference will be given to rural students listed on the EAS disadvantaged schools list: http://www.uac.edu.au/eas/schools/.
- demonstrate interpersonal skills such as leadership, communication skills, creativity, innovation, self-motivation and achievements in non-academic pursuits and involvement in school and community ventures,
- qualify and enrol into an aeronautical or aerospace Bachelor of Engineering course at the University of Sydney, and
- achieve an ATAR of 95 and above.

Selection criteria
Applicants will be assessed on their academic merit and must demonstrate interpersonal skills such as leadership, communication skills, creativity, innovation, self-motivation and achievements in non-academic pursuits and involvement in school and community ventures.

To demonstrate leadership skills and university engagement, you should:
- Supply a 250 word or less personal statement outlining how the Scholarship would benefit you,
- 250 words outlining your relevant experience for the above listed skills and experience, and
- provide a copy of your current CV.

Applicants must also provide evidence to demonstrate low-socioeconomic background. The Faculty defines low-socio economic background to include those suffering from: financial hardship, disability, significant medical hardship, family hardship, EAS or equivalent listed school or other. Documentary evidence required would include medical certificates, statements from Centrelink and others depending on individual circumstances.

The Scholarship shall be awarded on the Associate Dean (Education).

The Scholarship is tenable for up to four years. Payments shall be made in equal instalments after the census date of each semester. The Scholarship is valued at $6,000 per year subject to the recipient maintaining satisfactory academic performance deemed to be a credit average (65%) and above each semester.

Deferment of the Scholarship is not permitted. Combined degrees are also eligible. Please refer to the terms and conditions of this Scholarship for a full list of the conditions that apply.

Helpful tip
