The Legal Practitioners Admission Board and the Law Extension Committee invite all students enrolling in Legal Institutions and Contracts to the Diploma in Law Introductory Weekend, particularly those students enrolling for the first time. The Introductory Weekend will give you an opportunity to meet other students in the course, as well as some of the staff from the LEC and the LPAB.

The aim is to offer beginning students in Legal Institutions and Contracts the opportunity for an extensive start to the course. This should be particularly advantageous for both external students, and students who are likely to experience difficulty with the research and writing aspects of studying law.

The venue is the Eastern Avenue Auditorium, on the main campus at Sydney University (see the back of the Course Information Book for map and location details).

The Saturday morning session aims to give you a better understanding of the roles of both the LPAB and the LEC in the administration of the program. There will also be presentations on legal research and study skills from the University of Sydney Law Library and LEC teaching staff.

You will also hear from current and past students, on their experiences in the program and how to make the best of what the program has to offer.

Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning will be dedicated to an introduction to Legal Institutions, while the rest of Sunday will have an introduction to Contracts.

The Introductory Weekend is scheduled to start at 9.00am Saturday, 15 May 2004, with a welcome and introduction to the course from the Director of the Law Extension Committee, Mr Frank Astill, and the Executive Officer of the Legal Practitioners Admission Board, Mr Roger Wescombe.

A detailed programme will be available on the Law Extension Committee website in early May at:

Refreshments will be available throughout both days.

We look forward to meeting you during the Introductory Weekend.
