Sydney student awarded prestigious NH&MRC scholarship for PhD studies

Faculty of Nursing and Midwifery PhD candidate, Peta McVey, has been awarded a NH&MRC scholarship as part of a $1.1 grant for research into improving health issues associated with end-of-life and palliative care practices.

Peta’s scholarship is to examine the extent to which a palliative approach is being used in the organisation and provision of care to elderly people with complex needs in home and hostel settings. The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for Health and Ageing, Senator Brett Mason, made the announcement at RPA on 27 July 2007. In his announcement Senator Mason said that the Australian Government understood that this was a unique form of health care that must be integrated into the medical system.

The Faculty congratulates Peta on her success and is especially pleased that she has been awarded the first ever NH&MRC scholarship for a nurse to undertake PhD studies.

Sydney Nursing and Midwifery Foundation

The Dean, Professor Jocelyn Lawler, on behalf of the Faculty, is seeking Senate endorsement of a proposal to establish the Sydney Nursing and Midwifery Foundation. The establishment of a foundation has been a goal of the Faculty for some time and it is anticipated that the foundation can be launched before the end of the year. The Faculty will contribute an initial sum of $100,000 and seek to build on that with donations through a regular staff contribution scheme, bequests, donations from the public and the profession, and by hosting specific fundraising events.

The purposes of the foundation are to support nursing and midwifery research and to offer scholarships to nurses and midwives to undertake postgraduate study in Australia and internationally.

The Faculty’s alumni will be a major factor in the success of the foundation and the Dean is confident that they will see this as an opportunity to invest in the profession. Alumni will also be able to apply for funding support for their research and ongoing professional growth.
In his announcement, Professor Nutbeam noted that:

During her career, but particularly as dean, Jocalyn has seen major changes in nursing and in the Faculty itself. At the time she retires from her dean’s role, the Faculty will be graduating its first group of graduate entry Master’s qualified registered nurses, the first in Australia. The Faculty’s transformation from a large undergraduate entity into one that is smaller and focused on graduate entry preparation for practice, specialised postgraduate coursework, research and greater international engagement will be well advanced.

Jocalyn was born and raised in far western NSW and undertook her general nurse training in Broken Hill. Marilyn Orrock, a fellow trainee and now lecturer in the Faculty of Nursing and Midwifery, recalls some of Jocalyn’s antics during her time at the BH&DH.

Many of the things I remember are hilarious, like Jocalyn placing her tinnies in her metal rubbish bin and hitting it with the fire extinguisher (to chill them) and practising her golf in the corridors of the nurses home.

Things have changed a little since those days and while Jocalyn still keeps a golf club or two in her office, she rarely finds time to practise her swing.

After her training, Jocalyn stayed in the far west for a time working as a remote area nurse before undertaking an operating room nursing qualification in Sydney. She completed a Doctor of Philosophy in 1989 after gaining several other qualifications in education and the social sciences.

Jocalyn is a fellow of the College of Nursing and was elected by the membership to its governing council on a number of occasions and as president in 1993. She is a fellow of the Royal College of Nursing, Australia and was honoured this year in being asked to present its Patricia Chomley Oration. Jocalyn was a founding participant of the Australian Council of Deans of nursing, which has now become the Australian and New Zealand Council of Deans of Nursing and Midwifery.

In 2004, Jocalyn was made an honorary fellow of the Congress of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Nurses (CATSIN) in recognition of her long-held commitment to Australian Indigenous people. Since becoming dean, Jocalyn has taken major steps toward improving the health and education of Aboriginal Australians. She has encouraged Indigenous people to join the Faculty and supported Indigenous students within the Faculty. In 2006 there were four Indigenous students enrolled in undergraduate degrees, one student enrolled in the graduate entry, Master of Nursing program and three Indigenous students enrolled in post-graduate programs. These students have been supported throughout their studies by Indigenous nurse lecturers who also oversee the integration of Indigenous issues into all Faculty courses. Jocalyn also led the development and introduction of Australia’s first specialist degree in Indigenous nursing, the first graduates of which joined the workforce at the end of 2006.
Jocalyn’s research interests are located in unpopular, difficult or taboo areas of nursing. She has focused primarily on how nursing has been understood – or misunderstood as the case may be, particularly in relation to the history of ideas that have informed and misinformed views about nursing. Her long-standing research passion is the body and nurses’ practices related to the intimate and socially sensitive issues around the lived and experienced body of the patient, and the reasons why nurses’ work is poorly understood and invisible. She was a pioneer of this area of research in the 1980s and is internationally renown for her work. The book arising from her PhD research in this area has been translated into several languages and her other works and ideas are cited by nurses from many different cultures. More recently she has turned her attention to global issues affecting the nursing workforce and the way nursing is understood as a resource in a global information based economy.

Jocalyn has faced many professional challenges and changes in her 25 years in the tertiary sector. She commenced at the former Armidale CAE teaching in the post-registration education and administration nursing courses. Within three years, pre-registration nursing was transferred to CAEs, including Armidale and Sydney. Within a few more years these CAEs were to be amalgamated into the university sector and pre-registration nursing became a degree qualification. Jocalyn was integral to both nursing transfers in Armidale and took a leading role in the amalgamation of the former ACAE with the University of New England.

Jocalyn was the second professor of nursing appointed at The University of Sydney and she quickly became involved in the wider Sydney University community. She was a member of the standing committee of Academic Board from 1993 and elected deputy chair of the Board in 1996, a position she held until 2000 during which time she also chaired the undergraduate studies committee.

During Jocalyn’s term as dean, the Faculty has continued to evolve from a large, predominantly undergraduate student population into one that is smaller and focused on graduate entry preparation for practice, specialised postgraduate coursework and research training, research and greater international engagement. This transformation will be well underway as the faculty welcomes its third dean in 2008.
Behind the scenes contribution recognised

Mr Jem Masters, a colourful lecturer in the Faculty of Nursing and Midwifery, was recently recognised for outstanding contribution by an individual to the gay and lesbian community, in particular for his behind-the-scenes contribution at many community events and dance parties as the coordinator of Mardi Gras Medical. Jem received the award at the DIVAs, the Drag Industry Variety Awards, which acknowledges the talents and contribution made by members of the gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender, and queer community in the entertainment industry. The awards also recognise individuals, communities and organisations for their support of the gay and lesbian community.

Jem has worked with Mardi Gras Medical as a volunteer for more than 10 years, and has been coordinator for the past five years. Mardi Gras Medical provides a first line medical service to patrons at major community events, dance parties and Mardi Gras Parade. Coordination of Mardi Gras Medical involves managing a team of people, drawn from a pool of more than 280 volunteers, with medical backgrounds. The team’s role is to ensure that anyone with a medical problem receives pre-hospital assessment and treatment; it does this for around 200 people at each major event.

Jem’s DIVA was for his tireless behind the scene and coordinating work. However, he – and the rest of the audience at the DIVAs – were informed that this award did not give him permission to drive the medical buggy at events. Several drag queens and a number of other patrons have had lucky escapes from the buggy as Jem has driven to retrieve patrons and transport them to the medical tent.

Well done Jem.

Onshore BN (Post-registration) course commenced in KL

In July 2007 the Faculty of Nursing and Midwifery commenced the Bachelor of Nursing (Post-registration) onshore in Kuala Lumpur (KL). The BN (Post-registration) is a long-standing course offered by the Faculty and has remained a central component of the Faculty’s suite of courses.

The Malaysian initiative resulted from extensive discussion with the Ministry of Education, the Nursing Board of Malaysia and Assunta Hospital. Students enrolled in the BN (post-registration) in KL will complete the same units of study as their colleagues in Sydney. Some face-to-face lecture blocks will be held each semester and the students will engage with other students and the course material through our increasing on-line capability.

The first group are pictured here with Dr Maureen Boughton, Pro-Dean and Chair of the Faculty’s Board of Studies, at their orientation day. The students are very excited about their opportunity to study at The University of Sydney and the Faculty warmly welcomes them.
Student information

Location and Contact Details
Student Services is now located on the ground floor of building C. Counter hours are Monday–Thursday 10am–4pm, and Friday 10am–1pm. Staff may also be contacted via telephone during office hours on +61 2 9351 0693, or via email at fon@nursing.usyd.edu.au.

Correspondence via email
All students are issued with a University email address at enrolment. The University and the Faculty regularly communicates via this email address and therefore it is essential that you check it frequently. Failure to do so will not be an acceptable excuse in terms of any possible consequences which may arise.

Attention Pre-Registration Students
The Nurses and Midwives Board of New South Wales now requires all applicants for registration to provide an official academic transcript of results along with a letter of completion issued by the Faculty. For other requirements, please refer to the Nurses and Midwives Board NSW website at: http://www.nmb.nsw.gov.au/.

A transcript will be available for collection with the letter of completion at the conclusion of the course for eligible students from Student Services during counter hours. The cost associated with these transcripts will be $11 for two copies, which is payable on collection by cash, cheque or money order. Because of the new requirement, the timeframe for issuing these documents will be up to four weeks from the completion of the course.

Who’s who at the Faculty

Dr Maureen Boughton
Pro-Dean
Maureen's role as Pro-Dean involves deputising for the Dean. She also oversees much of the student governance of the Faculty, particularly through her role as Chair of the Faculty's Board of Studies.

Professor Trudy Rudge
Associate Dean, Learning and Teaching
Trudy is responsible for the academic coordination of the Faculty's courses of study and works with other members of the Faculty to oversee student admission, enrolment and progression. Trudy also reports on students' satisfaction with courses and units of study. She also has a leadership role in the ongoing academic development of courses of study and is actively engaged in her own research projects. In 2007, Trudy has a major role in our international PhD collaboration.

Murray Fisher
Associate Dean, Academic
Murray oversees the academic work involved in preparing, offering, staffing, assessing and reporting of results for all units of study offered by the Faculty. Murray works closely with the other associate deans and sub deans in the management of the Faculty's academic programs.

Professor Kate White
Associate Dean, Research
Kate’s role is to enhance and support the ongoing development of the Faculty’s research program, which involves both staff and students in the Faculty, as well as our clinical partners. As well, Kate maintains a strong leadership role and research program in her field of cancer nursing and is currently engaged in a number of funded projects to strengthen cancer nursing practice and research.

Stuart Newman
Sub Dean, International and Postgraduate Studies
Stuart is responsible for the Faculty’s international programs and conducting professional development and short courses offered to registered nurses. Stuart is also responsible for providing academic advice to postgraduate and post-registration students. He works closely with Trudy Rudge to ensure that all students progress satisfactorily and he has a particular role in advising and admitting new postgraduate students.

Lynne Brown
Sub Dean, Pre-registration
Lynne provides academic advice and support to graduate entry and combined degree/Master of Nursing students. She works closely with Trudy Rudge to ensure the satisfactory progression of all pre-registration students.

Sub Dean, Research
Heather’s role is to provide academic advice to potential higher degree research students (ie. those undertaking the PhD and MPhil) and, in conjunction with supervisors, to support existing students during their candidature. She also works with Jo Patching, Murray Fisher and the supervisors, to provide support for honours students.

Vicki Bradford
Sub Dean, Indigenous Strategy and Undergraduate
Vicki is responsible for academic advice to undergraduate pre-registration students. She is also responsible for assisting all Indigenous students within the Faculty and promoting the Faculty to prospective Indigenous students. Vicki plays an integral role in developing the future Indigenous strategies of the Faculty.

Dr Jenny Green
Sub Dean, Clinical Education
Jenny oversees the academic aspects of clinical education of pre-registration students. She works closely with Murray Fisher and Maria Carlisle to ensure that students have clinical placement experiences that meet course requirements.

Jo Patching
Honours Coordinator
Jo is the person to see if you are interested in completing honours, both for those who want to add an honours program to their bachelor degree, or who want to undertake the MN (Honours). If you are a final year pre-registration student interested in doing honours you should contact Jo to find out more. Or if you are a registered nurse upgrading your diploma to a degree, Jo can also assist you with advice about doing honours.

Sarah Brown
Manager, Student Administration
Sarah is responsible for the overall administration of student issues and the management of the student services team at the Faculty of Nursing and Midwifery.

Kate Lee
Assistant Manager, Student Administration
Kate is the most recent addition to our student services team and is responsible for the administration of local and international pre-registration students and other student administration issues in the manager’s absence. Students will contact Kate throughout their course for matters relating to or enquiries about courses, admission, progression and graduation.

Susanne Norton
Administration Officer
Susanne is responsible for the administration of local and international pre-registration and research degree students. Students contact Susanne throughout their course for matters relating to or enquiries about courses, admission, progression and graduation.

Maria Carlisle
Manager, Clinical Placements
Maria manages clinical placements for all pre-registration students in all the clinical units of study. Maria liaises with over 300 clinical placement sites and endeavours to ensure that all students have appropriate clinical experiences.
News
from the Associate Dean, Research

We are now in the middle of what has been a very successful year so far. In June, the Faculty held the annual postgraduate research forum. The seminars were a good opportunity to showcase the excellent work our students are undertaking. The forum was well attended and the quality of work presented was very high.

Professor Tina Lavender of the University of Central Lancashire in the UK was a visiting fellow at the Faculty in July. The research fellowship was undertaken with RPA Women and Babies Centre for Midwifery and Nursing Research. Professor Lavender specialises in midwifery and women's health. She is Conjoint Editor-in-Chief of the British Journal of Midwifery and also undertakes Cochrane reviews. Professor Lavender was a keynote speaker at the Working with Risk in Midwifery Practice Conference held 20 July 2007.

The Faculty was the principal sponsor of the 2007 Royal College of Nursing Australia Annual Conference, ‘Illuminating Nursing’. The dean of the Faculty of Nursing and Midwifery, Professor Jocalyn Lawler, gave the 41st Patricia Chomley Memorial Oration. Jocalyn and other faculty staff and research students provided a strong presence at the conference, presenting the results of several research projects. The Faculty also co-sponsored the Australian College of Mental Health Nurses Inc. Consultation Liaison Special Interest Group 2007 Conference. Doctoral candidate Timothy Wand convened the conference and presented a paper about his doctoral research.

Students and Faculty staff participate in international nursing PhD collaboration

PhD students Olivia Hill and Yen-Yen Chia were invited to participate in the International Nursing PhD Collaboration (INPhD). INPhD is a collaboration program for nursing PhD students from Australia, Spain, Mexico and Canada that involves a two week summer school in Mallorca, Spain. Olivia and Yen-Yen will undertake courses and workshops including a publication workshop and a PhD research workshop.

The Faculty joined the collaboration this year, and Professor Trudy Rudge will teach the course ‘Building the Discipline of Nursing Internationally’ at this year’s INPhD.

Faculty student attends international conference

The NSW Branch Australian College of Critical Care Nurses (ACCCN) funded PhD student Andrea Marshall’s trip to the Society of Critical Care Medicine’s 6th Summer Conference in Intensive Care Medicine, held in Toronto, Canada. This year, the focus was ‘Nutrition as a therapeutic agent to improve critical care outcomes’. The conference featured discussions by world leaders on nutrition issues and included representatives from the fields of medicine, dietetics, pharmacy and nursing.

Summer scholars ceremony

The participants in the Summer Scholarship Program received their certificates at the 26 March Brown Bag. Professor Kate White, Associate Dean (Research), and Dr Maureen Boughton, Pro Dean, congratulated the scholars on their achievements and discussed how beneficial the program had been for students and staff. Based on the successful pilot undertaken this year, the program will be formalised and run annually during the summer and winter break periods. The Faculty would like to extend their congratulations to the students for their excellent work.

Paper published in prestigious Chinese language journal

Dr Fung (Tebbin) Kuen Koo and her co-author, Associate Professor Louise Rowling from the Faculty of Education and Social Work, have had a refereed paper published in a prestigious Chinese language journal, in English.

The paper, The Understanding of Physical Activity Among Older Hong Kong Chinese Australians, will appear in the Journal of Tianjin University of Sport, 22 (3), 200–06. Although the paper was provided in both English and Chinese versions, the journal published the paper in English, which makes it a more prestigious publication for its authors.

Further information about the paper can be obtained from Tebin kfoo@nursing.usyd.edu.au or Louise l.rowling@edfac.usyd.edu.au.

Abstract

Physical activity has been defined as “any bodily movement produced by skeletal muscles that results in energy expenditure”. It is strongly endorsed as a means of staying healthy and an important avenue for social contact. Exercise is a subset of physical activity and is defined as planned, structured and repetitive bodily movement done to improve or maintain one or more components of physical fitness.

Although in Australia, some studies have been conducted into the levels of physical activity in some ethnic communities, there has been a tendency to adopt a homogeneous view of culturally and linguistically diverse (CALD) people rather than an ethno-specific perspective that recognises differing cultural beliefs and practices between and across language groups.

This paper reports on a study that aimed to explore the concepts of, and attitudes towards, physical activity among older Hong Kong Chinese Australians resident in NSW. This study involved individual in-depth interviews and the use of open-ended questions. A total of 22 informants was recruited for the study.

The findings revealed that most informants did not have a clear idea about what was meant by the term physical activity. "Physical activity" tended to be a confusing and complicated term to this group. In addition, attitudes towards physical activity among this group reflect their cultural and health beliefs in preventive health care.

To increase the physical activity level among older Hong Kong Chinese Australians, culturally-specific health promotion strategies might be needed to tackle the misconception about and specific attitudes towards physical activity, as well as to match the holistic Chinese concept of health maintenance.

NBCC Culturally and Linguistically Diverse (CALD) Group 2007

Dr Cannas Kwok was invited to give a speech at the National Breast Cancer Centre 2007 CALD Group’s Women’s Health Campaign on 29 March. The campaign’s aim is to address gaps in breast awareness and information for women from multicultural backgrounds. It does this through the translation of three of its key resources into the five culturally and linguistically diverse languages most commonly spoken in Australia after English; Chinese, Arabic, Vietnamese, Greek and Italian. The campaign has the full support of the Prime Minister’s wife, Mrs Jeanette Howard, and the Governor of NSW, Professor Marie Bashir, both of whom attended the event.

Cannas spoke about her research on exploring the role of culture in breast health practices among Chinese–Australian women. She highlighted how Chinese women perceived breast cancer and how these cultural perceptions impact on their breast health practices. She also shared her experience of conducting breast health promotion programs in the Chinese community in conjunction with Chinese organisations. Cannas emphasised how effective culturally sensitive programs can be in promoting breast health awareness.

Faculty short courses

Aged Care Management: People, Politics, Money and Quality
The aim of this course is to construct a framework on which participants can explore current aged care management issues and the contemporary political and policy initiatives underpinning management challenges in the aged care sector.

This course will provide participants with theoretical and practical management knowledge, which will enhance their ability to manage commonly encountered situations, and respond proactively to the daily challenges and changes confronting them in the aged care setting.

Vignettes and simulated work scenarios will be interspersed throughout the course to provide an environment for participants to discuss and debate issues and to investigate ways of implementing new ideas, knowledge and skills in their respective workplaces.

This course is conducted over six days and delivered in three two-day modules. Participants may enrol in the full six-day program or any of the two-day modules.

Module 1 (Days 1 & 2)
