1. GENERAL INFORMATION

Non-degree students pay full tuition fees to undertake a unit of study (subject) offered in the Faculty of Science without being enrolled in an award course (degree). Non-degree students take the unit of study with award course students and are assessed at the same level.

Applicants for non-degree study should consult the Science Handbook or Departmental/School websites to identify units of study in which they would like to enrol at the University of Sydney. Applicants need to be able to meet the same prerequisites as students enrolled in an award course at the University of Sydney (or have completed equivalent units of study at another institution) to be able to enrol in any particular unit of study.

Australian citizens/permanent residents and New Zealand citizens are eligible to apply for non-degree study.

International applicants may be permitted to undertake some non-degree study subject to the conditions of their visa. The cost of undertaking non-degree study will differ from that listed below. Potential International applicants should contact the Faculty of Science Student Information Office for more details before applying.

Non-degree students are subject to the rules of the University of Sydney including those relating to Special Arrangements, Special Consideration, Code of Conduct for Students, and Student Plagiarism. Details on these policies and unit of study information are published in the Science Handbook and are available online from the Faculty of Science website: http://sydney.edu.au/science.

If your application is approved, you will be advised on enrolment procedures by post to the correspondence address provided on your application form. You will need to come to the Faculty of Science in person to enrol.

2. TUITION FEES

Successful applicants for non-degree study are required to pay tuition fees. Payment must be made in full at time of enrolment. Commonwealth Support, HECS-Help and FEE-Help are not available to non-degree students. No scholarships are available to pay tuition fees, although meritorious students may be eligible for prizes (detailed in the Science Handbook) at the completion of their studies.

Fees vary between units of study and are subject to change without notice - for specific fee information about the unit of study you wish to enrol in please search for the unit here http://sydney.edu.au/courses/?action=uos_search_advanced.

3. APPLICATION

A non-degree application must be submitted and approved before students can enrol. All students will be advised of the outcome of their application by letter to the correspondence address provided on their application.

Complete a non-degree study application online
Applications must be made online at http://sydney.edu.au/courses/Science-Undergraduate-Non-Degree.

Provide documentary evidence of prior secondary and tertiary study
Your application will not be considered without your academic history.
