Exam Marking in the School of Physics
v1.0 – as recorded in TLC minutes 21/7/10

General principle
All staff allocated teaching are expected to mark some proportion of the papers for any unit or module in which they teach. This applies at all year levels with the possible exception of some postgraduate coursework units.

First year exam marking
The Director of First Year Physics will take note of higher year marking as we have done in the past, with lecturers marking their own exam papers as indicated by the higher year coordinators. For many people, this will approximate a nominal marking load.

Any T&R staff with significantly less than a nominal marking load will be allocated some first year marking, but only if they taught in first year that semester and only in the module they taught. This point is a change from previous practice, but not too dramatic. It does mean that we cannot balance out marking loads as effectively between staff.
