

Sir Zelman Cowen Universities Fund

Roger Sebel Hebrew University Medical Elective Term Fellowships

The Sir Zelman Cowen Universities Fund is a private, charitable foundation set up in 1978 and named in honour of Sir Zelman Cowen, Governor General of Australia 1977-1982. It has over the years contributed several million dollars in research funds to the University of Sydney and the Hebrew University of Jerusalem for medical and scientific research. Since 1999, the Fund has also supported a program of academic and student exchange between the two Universities.

As an extension of this program, in 2006, the Fund established fellowships to assist University of Sydney medical students to undertake their medical elective term at the Hebrew University.
