STUDY PROJECT
MANAGEMENT BY DISTANCE:
14-WEEK COURSE DESIGNED FOR BUSY PROFESSIONALS

STUDY VIA ONLINE
CLASSROOMS AND
ATTEND A SHORT 3-DAY
RESIDENTIAL

This program is designed for busy professionals and is delivered primarily by distance via an online collaborative classroom. With a small cohort of 15-25 students, you will receive individual guidance, feedback and support from your facilitator and work closely with other students in the program. You will attend a short three-day residential at the University of Sydney where you will work closely with your teammates and get started on your group projects, which you will continue to develop in the online classrooms.

COURSE OVERVIEW

Project management skills are fast becoming an essential part of every manager’s skill set. While today we still view project management as a separate responsibility from general management, it is highly likely that this separation will disappear in the near future and every person with the word “manager” in their title will be required to have a very sound set of project management skills as part of their repertoire.

Animal industries involve many people, many different organisations and the need to cope with new issues quickly and efficiently. This means that these industries are conducive to management by project. Regardless of the depth of expertise in technical issues, it is essential to complement these with project management and leadership skills to enable you to bring together a diverse group of stakeholders to all proceed down a well-described path to a common goal.

ABOUT THE FACILITATOR

Jürgen Oschadleus is an international speaker, facilitator, writer and consultant who assists organisations, teams and individuals to convert their knowledge into focused, effective actions.

He has several years of strategic consulting experience with ProjectWise and Booz-Allen & Hamilton (South Africa), systems deployment projects for Concur Technologies UK, CPA/Advantage, SAS Institute and now manages Act Knowledge, a niche leadership education and consulting firm, and is the Managing Partner of the Australian branch of Valense, a global network of organisational consultants. He facilitates project management, supply chain/operational management and communication & leadership development courses for various institutions, and is a recognised presenter at international conferences on project and business leadership.
