Unilever

Today we're all being told that leadership is about being visionary, adaptive, situational, empowering, collaborative, big picture yet driven by big data, coaching, challenging and of course, inspiring...phew! But what does that all mean to you? Companies today are in some instances recruiting people with criteria where up to 80% of the decision to hire is based on the leadership and behavioural competencies that you show at interview. But what are these competencies, how do you "get" them and more so, express them (while still being, well, YOU!)?

Come to this Unilever session where our managers and leaders will act as coaches and mentors to help answer this challenge. We will demystify the behaviours that are the typical criteria used, we will help you to understand what your leadership and behavioural strengths are, and importantly, how you can show them at interview and in your everyday life.
