

Veterinary Clinical Residency Positions currently available at the University Veterinary Teaching Hospitals Sydney and Camden campuses

The School of Veterinary Science, University of Sydney, currently has vacancies in multiple specialty residency programs at both the Sydney and Camden campuses commencing in January and March 2019.

Sydney vacancies:

Emergency Medicine and Critical Care (January 2019)

Small Animal Medicine (March)

Diagnostic Imaging (March)

Camden vacancies:

Equine Medicine (March)

These three-year, full-time programs will enable a successful applicant to fulfil the credentialing requirements for specialisation for specialist examination by the Australian and New Zealand College of Veterinary Scientists and/or relevant overseas colleges. Each of the residencies is directly supervised by board-certified specialists. This program requires completion of concurrent Masters degrees in coursework and research. A tax free stipend of $43,000 pa is available for the most outstanding applicants.

The closing date for applications has been extended to December 7th 2018. Interviews will occur shortly afterwards.

Applications are restricted to veterinarians with a degree registerable in New South Wales. Candidates must have an Honours degree or equivalent as well as Australian citizenship or Australian permanent residency.

Applicants must have completed a rotating internship or have equivalent clinical experience in practice.

For an application form and further information

Phone +61 2 93518783, vetsci.educationsupport@sydney.edu.au or visit http://sydney.edu.au/vetscience/clinical_residency/.