

Employment Relations and the Law

Seminar Series 2019

Wednesday evenings

6.15-8.15pm

13 March - 22 May 2019

Sydney Law School

New Law Building (F10)
Eastern Avenue
The University of Sydney
Camperdown

Registration (inc GST)

Full Fee Early bird (until 22 February): $990

Full fee (after until 22 February): $1,200

Group (3+ from the same org): $900

Alumni: $792

University of Sydney staff receive a 50% discount on the series fees. For details on how to register, please email:

law.events@sydney.edu.au

Registration is essential

CLICK HERE to register, or visit the online events calendar: sydney.edu.au/law/events

For further enquiries

T +61 2 9351 0248

E law.events@sydney.edu.au

This popular annual series is made up of 10 evening seminars and provides an introduction to the current regulation of employment and labour relations in Australia.

Topics include: the fundamentals of employer and employee rights and obligations under the Fair Work Act, the common law of employment and anti-discrimination law, as well as the regulation of collective bargaining and industrial action. Special interest topics include contemporary issues - social media, workplace investigations, vulnerable workers, equality and diversity in work and emerging issues in the gig economy.

Students will be advised of reading materials relevant to the series of lectures. A number of the lecturers will also supply students with copies of papers and notes relevant to their presentations.

No formal qualifications are required for enrolment. It is assumed that participants may vary considerably in their previous knowledge and experience of different topics.

Information for lawyers and barristers

Attendance at this seminar series is equal to 20 MCLE/CPD units, based on 2 points per seminar attended.