Administrative History:

William Charles Henry Eddy was born in Maryborough, Queensland on the 15th of September 1913. The family moved to Newcastle at the age of 6 where he was educated at Waratah Public School and Newcastle High School. Eddy entered Moore Theological College with the intention of becoming a Church of England priest. However, while studying philosophy—'to discover proofs of God's existence'—he was deeply influenced by Professor John Anderson. He abandoned his religious vocation and adopted Anderson's atheistic philosophy.¹ Eddy graduated with a BA in first class honours in History & Philosophy (1934), Honours MA in Philosophy (1936) and the Diploma of Education (1938) with the Beavis prize and the Jones medal as the most distinguished graduate of his year. He lectured for a year at St John's College, Morpeth and for 2 years at Sydney Teacher's College and taught in secondary schools.

In 1936 at West Wallsend he took his first adult education class as a part time tutor of the University of Sydney's Department of Tutorial Classes. In 1938 Eddy married Madge Leonie Chick. He joined the staff of the Department of Tutorial Classes of the University of Sydney as Senior Lecturer in Newcastle in 1945. He continued to work there and its successor, the Department of Adult Education, until his death. He was at that time Senior Lecturer in charge of the Metropolitan (Sydney) programme. He spent 1969 on study leave in Oxford, visiting all the main University and WEA community education centres in England and Wales.

Harry Eddy was active in the WEA as a tutor and committee-man until his death. In 1972 he was WEA State President. Other organisations on which he served included the NSW Adult Education Advisory Board and the Australian Association for Cultural Freedom. He was co-founder and first president of the Sydney Philosophy Club and was President when he died. He was also a member of the editorial committee of the Current Affairs Bulletin for twenty years. A staunch anti-communist, he studied Marxist theory and practice in order to refute them.

In the 1940s Eddy founded the only branch of the Australasian Association of Psychology and Philosophy initiated outside of a university city in Newcastle. He was instrumental in having the annual congress of that Association held in Newcastle for the first time in 1949. Eddy also played a role in the founding of the University of Newcastle. The movement to gain University facilities for the youth of the district was given tremendous impetus when Eddy joined the struggle and formed the Newcastle University Establishment Group, a voluntary body of interested citizens. Eddy did a great deal towards making Newcastle a learning society for many hundreds who wanted to learn, not only by his development of the tutorial class programme and the founding of the University of Newcastle, but also by his work for the founding of the Newcastle Cultural Centre (Library, Art Gallery and Conservatorium of Music, the Temple Bookshop and the WEA Studio Theatre).

Harry Eddy died at the age of 60 on the 9th of December 1973.

Series 4: Orr Case

Date Range: 1958-1976

Item List: Yes

Quantity: 0.18m

Accession No: 1452, 1754

Series Description:

Sydney Sparks Orr, Professor of Philosophy of the University of Tasmania, was dismissed by the Tasmanian University Council from his Chair on March 16, 1956 on a series of academic charges instigated by an allegation of misconduct by an 18 year old female student of Orr's. Harry Eddy had only met Orr once. During a lecture series organised by the WEA where Eddy gave a lecture, he was asked whether or not Orr was guilty of the charges against him. Eddy realised that in answering 'no' to the question, there was a great deal more to the case. A close study of the many documents of the case, including the ten volumes of the appeal book containing the pleadings and evidence and other relevant material in the Supreme Court, convinced him that Orr was innocent and he wrote Orr.

The series includes newspaper clippings re the Orr case, Eddy's book and Gross Moral Turpitude by Cassandra Pybus (1993) in which she claimed that Orr was guilty of sexual misconduct. There is also an edited version of Eddy's book Orr, and papers on the case by Eddy. Orr's thesis for his MA degree is also contained within the series. Included within the correspondence is a letter to Orr from Eddy detailing John Anderson's funeral.

For additional papers on Orr see also:

Series 6: Issues Eddy involved/interested in

Date Range: 1938-1972

Item List: Yes

Quantity: 0.18m

Accession No: 1452, 1754

Series Description:

This series contains material on issues and groups in which Eddy was either involved directly or interested in. In 1940 charges were brought against Eddy and 2 other colleagues by the Reverend Father Forrest while working at the Sydney Teachers College. Father Forrest claimed that the 3 accused attacked morality amongst other things. The documents include letters wrote by Eddy to those he lectured to confirm or deny the charges, the replies and an outline of the charges.

There are letters from John Anderson to Harry and his wife, newspaper clippings and papers by Professor Anderson.

The series also includes minutes of the Democratic Group (– Harry's wife Madge was also a member); the Sydney Philosophy Club of which he was co-founder and President when he died; and, Peace With Freedom which was an Australian wide organisation concerned with issues associated with defence, foreign policy, communism at home and abroad, and all forms of political and intellectual collaboration.

There are a few documents concerning Frank Knöpfelmacher who was approved for a post in Political Philosophy at Sydney University but the post was blocked by the University Senate. There are also documents pertaining to the controversy within the Philosophy Department at the University when a proposal was introduced for an optional course on Marxism-Leninism.
