Postgraduate coursework

Master's degrees

Admissions criteria vary from program to program, but at a minimum, entry into a master's degree at the University of Sydney Business School requires the completion of the equivalent of an Australian bachelor's degree, or graduate diploma/graduate certificate from a recognised tertiary institution with a minimum credit (65 percent) average.

Qualifications awarded outside Australia can also be used for admission but equivalencies and admission criteria are determined based on the country, institution and qualification. For a guideline of the most common international admission criteria, please refer to the table 'Application requirements for international students' below.

A statement of motivation and interview is required for admission to the Master of Business Administration and Master of Management. The Master of Human Resource Management and Industrial Relations and the Master of International Business require a statement of motivation and a copy of your CV.

Some specialist programs require your undergraduate degree to be in the same field as the master's program you are applying for.

Graduate Diplomas

Graduate diplomas and certificates generally include units of study from the master's programs, and provide an exit point after fewer units of study.

For entry into a graduate diploma, students must have the equivalent of an Australian bachelor's degree or higher-level qualification from a recognised tertiary institution with a minimum 60 percent average.

Upgrading to a Master's degree

Students may apply to upgrade from a graduate diploma to the relevant master's degree within the embedded sequence upon completion of at least four units of study. A minimum credit (65 percent) average is required across all units of study attempted in order for upgrade applications to be considered. Upgrades are competitive and subject to places available.

Graduate Certificates

For entry into a graduate certificate, students must have the equivalent of an Australian bachelor's degree or higher-level qualification OR at least three years' relevant work experience.

Graduate certificates are not available to students on an International Student Visa.

Upgrading to a Master's degree or a Graduate Diploma

Students may apply to upgrade from a graduate certificate to the relevant master's degree or graduate diploma within the embedded sequence upon completion of at least four units of study. A minimum credit (65 percent) average is required across all units of study attempted in order for upgrade applications to be considered. Upgrades are competitive and subject to places available.

Application requirements for international students

Academic qualifications guidelines by country for entry to masters and graduate diploma qualifications in the University of Sydney Business School

For international students, it is advisable to contact us at sydney.edu.au/ask for more information on how your degree average grade equates to average grade for Australian universities.

The following table outlines the scores that the Business School has determined to be equivalent to a 65 percent and 60 percent grade average for those countries from which many of our international students come. For countries with different tiers of institutions, the table lists a range of scores and the relevant score will depend on the issuing institution.

The Business School also assesses whether a particular qualification in a country is equivalent to an Australian bachelor's degree. A final decision on whether a particular qualification is sufficient for entry into a degree program at the Business School will be made upon application.
