

You are here:

TEACHING @ SYDNEY

November 2012

Learning analytics and MOOCs: What do they mean for you?

Register now for a UTS conference later this month to find out more about social learning analytics and massive open online courses (MOOCs).

The UK Open University's research into the development of social learning analytics – analytics that can be used to understand and support how learners build knowledge together in different cultural and social settings, both inside and outside formal education, will be showcased by Rebecca Ferguson from the UK Open University at the Southern SoLAR Flare conference on Learning Analytics, 29/30 November.

Other presentations and papers are related to the rise of MOOCs. For more information, or to register, click here.
