

You are here:

TEACHING @ SYDNEY

April 2013

Sydney Teaching Colloquium 2013 (October 2-3)... save the date!

Once again the University will celebrate teaching excellence, and share ideas about curriculum innovation and engaged enquiry at this year's Sydney Teaching Colloquium. It will take place on 2-3 October in MacLaurin Hall – so, save the date!

The Colloquium will feature keynote presentations, plenary sessions, students' perspectives, and it will provide faculties with opportunities to share strategies and practices. Planning for the 2013 Colloquium will begin in the next month, and feedback from 2012 participants is being incorporated.

Resources from the 2012 Sydney Teaching Colloquium are still available - topics include: assessment, community-engaged learning and teaching, inclusive teaching and widening participation, Indigenous education strategy, research-enriched learning and teaching, research supervision, technology-enhanced curriculum, transition to university, and the startup funding program Incubate.
